Ferry-building is good business

Judy Reimche
Peninsula News Review

The news has been bad for the provincial government, but Greg Ramsay believes the new fast ferries are the wave of the future. And he stands by the work that his company, Consolidated Pacific Industries, has done on the new catamarans for the BC Ferries Corporation.

His company, based at Ramsay Machine Works in the industrial park on Henry Avenue in Sidney, built major components for the first of the aluminum catamaran ferries, and is well into production on the second. The third is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

"And I have potential orders pending for 14 other ferries, coming from around the world," he said. "If this industry was privatized, which I believe must happen, it will prove to be a viable one, with good future markets."

CPI, of which Ramsay is chief executive officer and president, includes Alberni Engineering and Point Hope shipyards. The three together constructed the top sections of the ferries; the bottom sections were built by Vancouver shipyard firms.

There are approximately 200 fast catamarans in use around the world, in varying sizes and classes. The ones being built here for the B.C. government are the second fastest type.

Ramsay said accusations that these ferries won't do the job are simply wrong.

"This isn't new technology."

Trustees split over deficit

Kevin Woodley

Peninsula News Review

With reports of a budget shortfall nearing $1 million, three of the School District 63 school board trustees want the public to know it doesn't have to happen this way.

Jim Woolford, Sheila Fea and Patti Sollars believe that a balanced budget can be achieved without taking away from the classroom.

"We have been voting against expenditures consistently, but we're being outvoted," said Sollars.

The trio pointed to the administration level within school District 63 as a starting point towards eliminating any deficit in this year's budget. The biggest cost-saving suggestion is to eliminate the recently-vacated assistant superintendent position for student services. The district has six senior administrators, a number that Sollars and company feel is too high for 22 schools.

Woolford pointed to a June, 1997 review of the district's administrative structure as another example of wasted spending. After investing $27,000 on the report, Woolford

More time for more crime

Benjamin Rheume was sentenced to one year jail time for his involvement in a May 1997 Sooke home invasion.

He was the first of three people to be sentenced for the crime.

David Clayton Bernier was convicted for his part in the home invasion earlier this month. He will be sentenced before Justice John Bouck in B.C. Supreme Court Feb. 8.

A woman who has admitted to her involvement in the home invasion, Jacklyn Buckberrough, will be sentenced Feb. 9.

Rheume, 26, was transported from William Head Institution to Western Communities provincial court last week for sentencing.

The Edmonton native is serving a three year sentence, handed down in June 1997, for accessory to manslaughter, obstruction of justice and interfering with human remains.

Rheume was involved in the burning of the body of Michael Stephen on Pat Bay beach in May 1995. Stephen had been shot dead in an apartment on Pandora Avenue.

Judge Tony Palmer ordered Rheume locked up for an additional year for the home invasion.

Defence lawyer Clark Purves said Rheume had become hooked on cocaine and involved in the drug subculture.

However, since he has been behind bars he has gotten married, upgraded his education, and taken a number of drug rehabilitation and life skills programs.

The Catamarans

Ramsay says privatizing will help build a successful industry

These ferries are based on the catamarans being produced in Australia by InCat Incorporated. If you go to Sydney harbor, you'll see these in and out constantly, different sizes and speeds."

When the budget was first struck, in 1992, cost for the first ferry was estimated at $60 million. That has risen, and today the cost has been found to be $113 million.

"Yes, the first one did cost about $113 million, but there were some first-time costs included that won't be necessary in future," Ramsay said.

The major additional costs included the training of 600 people to work on the project, and some redesign work. Since the shipyard industry had been laid idle several years ago, there were not enough trained people in this province to do the work. Ramsay said that training was rolled into the costs for the first vessel.

And, he said, these ferries are based on the design of the Australian models made by InCat which load and unload through the same entrance on the side of the ship. BC Ferries wanted these redesigned to load from one end and unload from the other, as is the standard for the ferries used on the west coast. That also added to the cost, but was considered a one-time expenditure.

The necessity to replace the engine's cylinders part way through the process, he said, was not because they were faulty, but because of a manufacturer's upgrade on the cylinder sleeves. "And that was all under warranty," Ramsay said.

There are also allegations that the 880-tonne vessels won't be able to carry a full sengers. That hasn't changed. They have done the speed checks; the first one did 42 knots under Lions Gate bridge. As for fuel, the engines aren't even worn in. How can anyone say [that] when they don't know yet? And vessels like these are already operating, and operating well, elsewhere in the that added to the costs," he said. If the industry was turned over to the private sector, he believes the costs would be less.

"This is the future for marine transportation," Ramsay said. "I could sell this vessel to the international market for about with privatization proposals after BC Ferries call out last February, according to Erik Kristiansen, BC Ferries Director of Communications.

Ramsay's proposal is based on building the ferries and leasing them to the government. That way, the private industry takes the financial risks, and the government service costs are reduced significantly.

As for the two remaining vessels, Ramsay said the second is expected to cost about $100 million to complete, and the third is predicted to cost $85 million.

"Every time there is progress, there are also naysayers," said Ramsay. "This project was begun to revitalize the shipbuilding industry in this province, and it can do that. We have 600 people working now (50 of whom are working on the components being built at Ramsay Machine Works). That puts about $65,000 a year each in wages and benefits into this community.

If we don't continue this program, all those people will go where they can use the training. Training the people of B.C. paid for. If we keep the training here, private industry can take over and we're all ahead."

Ramsay said it's essential for private companies to get an answer on privatization from the government within the next three months.

Kristiansen countered that there is "no specific timeline set at this point."

He said the focus of government for now is to have a review of costs and the reporting structure which is in the hands of Philip Halkett, new chief executive officer for BC Ferries.

Assembly of the first aluminum catamaran ferry at CFI with panels and modules being supplied by Ramsay Machine Works

"There is a market out there, no question," said Ramsay. "As long as it can be run in an efficient manner, and that means by private industry. As long as it's in government hands, it will cost more."

world."

"I think [some] costs got out of hand basically because this is a government organization. There was a rush to get the first one built and in the water, and $120 million. And I know there will be a continuing market for them."

Transport watchdog gives fast ferries high marks

Jane's High-speed Marine Transportation (1996-97 report) shows a record year for ship orders, deliveries, operations and supplies of services and equipment to the fast marine transport sector worldwide.

- The 1995-96 year saw the setting up of more than 30 new fast ferry operations and in 1996-97 another 50 new companies cropped up to supply the industry.

- More than 70 craft were delivered in 1996-97, and another 80 craft were on order. The tonnage associated with these craft increased significantly over that one-year period.

- Sales of small to medium-size craft stabilized, and growth in orders for vessels with payload capacities of over 200 tonnes was expanding rapidly.

- While the extent of orders for small to medium size craft had leveled off, innovation in their design continued to develop, improving performance and cost effectiveness.

- Multihull vessels are operating across the Irish Sea at speeds of over 40 knots and carrying payloads of 500 tonnes, with orders coming in for large and similarly fast monohull ferries with payload capacities in excess of 700 tonnes.

- Over 600 large fast passenger/car ferries have been delivered or ordered since the first 74-meter wave-piercing catamaran ro-ro craft was delivered in 1990. Prior to that time only the British Hovercraft Corporation SRN4 hovercraft of the 1960s could be described as fast passenger/car ferries.

- In 1995 the British hovercraft set a new record by crossing the English Channel in 22 minutes — faster even than by car on Le Shuttle via the new Channel Tunnel.

- The largest craft of this type is the Stena HSS 1500 and the Financeri MDV 3000 Jupiter vessels, built in Finland. The Stena HSS has a payload capacity of over 500 tonnes and an operational speed of 40 knots.

- The fast freight vessel market is just beginning to take off, with Japan, Korea and Australia presently at the forefront of the industry.

Land reassessment adds to tax woes

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

An assessment error from 1997 is coming home to roost, and North Saanich municipality will have to pay the bill.

Mayor Linda Michaluk said her council was hit this week with the news that the B.C. Assessment Authority has re-evaluated the airport lands, and has dropped the 1997 value by $8,911,600 and the 1998 value by $9,316,600. That is an assessment reduction of about 30 per cent.

The municipal share of the taxes for the two years is $166,696.

The municipality is charged with coming up with that shortfall in one budget year.

"This couldn't have come at a more unfortunate time," the mayor said.

There are some alternatives. The municipality is owed money for a DND property on the airport land, for which they have not received a grant in lieu of taxes or property taxes for either 1997 or 1998. North Saanich has begun an appeal process to recover those funds, but at this point there is confusion on the part of the federal government as to who should pay.

"If we are able to recover those funds, and if we draw down our surplus fund, then we can reduce what must be paid to about $43,000," said Michaluk. "But there are some big 'ifs' here."

She said the municipality and the Victoria Airport Authority will meet this week to begin to come up with some creative solutions for paying the bill.

Dunsmuir use violates bylaw

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

The legal opinion is in, and it states that Dunsmuir Lodge's current use violates North Saanich zoning by-laws.

North Saanich Councillor Ron Townshend said the legal report was discussed in an incamera session on Monday, Jan. 18. Dunsmuir Lodge, as an adjunct to the University of Victoria, approached council last fall with a proposal to expand its present premises. The intent is to extend the convention centre use of the Lodge, and open it up to further international use.

But local business owners are objecting, saying the Lodge is already violating its original agreement, under which they were to operate as an arm of UVic, and not as a hotel and restaurant facility. However, in recent years brochures have been sent from Dunsmuir Lodge advertising itself as just that.

Hotel owners are angry, alleging that the Lodge has put itself in direct competition with them even though Dunsmuir has the advantage of paying no taxes to the municipality. On behalf of Dunsmuir Lodge, the provincial government pays about $7,000 per year to the municipality of North Saanich in lieu of taxes.

"The original agreement was that the Lodge would be used for educational or research purposes," Townshend said. "Ads for tourist getaways are against that stated use."

North Saanich council decided it will not proceed with Dunsmuir Lodge's application until the issues are resolved. "People appreciate having this facility in their neighborhood," Townshend said. "But they feel they should pay property taxes. People are against leasing the property for purposes other than education. That's the one the university has to grapple with."

Council will continue its discussions with the university and with the provincial government.

"I would hope we'll get this back on the committee of the whole meeting table soon. The facility is an important part of our community, and of the university community," said Townshend. "I stick by my original words, this is an exciting proposal. But it can't go forward if they're not working side by side in conjunction with the business community."

Last ditch solution sought for Sanscha

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Whether or not the doors to Sanscha Hall will remain open is in the hands of the Peninsula Recreation Commission. They have already served notice that they will withdraw service from the hall on June 1 because, says PRC chair Sherry Williams, the limitations of the building, especially the lack of showers and its having a concrete floor, and the fact it ran a deficit last year, are outweighing its central location.

"When our management agreement started in September of 1994 the idea was that in three or four years there would be a new facility started," she said.

Now, the current programs can't be continued unless the building is either upgraded or replaced.

"A lot of the programs that were offered in Sanscha will still happen, they just won't happen there," she said. Many of the programs will be moved to Central Saanich, where there are better facilities.

Memorial Park Society chair Richard Holmes said he believes it all comes down to management styles. He has asked them to consider some different management styles to better accommodate use.

Williams said that has been considered, but the deciding factor had to be the suitability of the building.

"The Rec commission likes to keep to a break even budget on programs. Our deficit last year was $23,000 for programming at the hall."

A meeting of the Rec Commission, which includes the three municipalities, is scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 28, but Williams expects that the 180-day notice won't change.

The PRC will no longer manage the program, and that means the building will be without any form of management, which is necessary to maintain standards — unless the MPS board can afford to hire their own, a scenario Williams doesn't see happening.

In the meantime, the MPS has retained the services of Navion Canada to raise the $3 million needed to build a new hall.

Centre block moves ahead

Judy Reimche

Peninsula News Review

Sidney council has approved an application for a development permit for the project known as the Centre Block. The approval came at the January 25 meeting, and is subject to the project meeting the design guidelines (for the building face, site lighting, landscaping, etc.).

There are also details to be worked out regarding the town property that is included in the site plan. The land was released to the Town of Sidney by the provincial government, and there are some issues about the uses of that land that must be resolved.

"Until we discuss that [with the provincial government] we don't know for sure what we can do there," said Mayor Don Amos. He hopes to get an answer to those questions within the next two weeks.

Councillors Ted Daly and Peter Wainwright voted against the approval because of concerns about the massing and building heights. "This [plan] is a major change in concept from the vision we started with," Wainwright said.

However, the majority of council decided to go ahead, so that the plans could be taken forward to public hearing.

"I feel strongly that this should go forward. We should hear from the public," said Mayor Don Amos. "They may give us ideas on how the plans should change."

School District spending can be further curtailed

said most of the key recommendations were ignored or manipulated.

Reducing spending on such items as vehicle leases and cellular telephones, and non-contractual professional development expenditures and meetings in "cost facilities" like Dunsmuir Lodge are further ways the deficit could be significantly reduced.

So far the suggestions have been voted down by the other four members of the school board. The decision to go public with their concerns over the budget process comes one week after the Peninsula News Review ran a story that said the board would be applying to the provincial government for a deficit of more than $400,000.

To get to that $400,000 mark, more than $500,000 will have to be trimmed from last year's expenditures, but early indications from the board are for cuts in computer technology, special education equipment and paper supplies.

"There is lots of opportunity to reduce the budget in this district without touching teachers and kids," said Fea.

"Forty-seven other districts have balanced their budget."

In Sooke's School District 62, with 23 schools and similar enrolment numbers, the number of executive staff is four. Only two Sooke executives have leased vehicles, compared to all six in SD 63.

Joan Axeford, secretary treasurer at School District 63, says addition of the leased vehicle tops up her salary to equal the average of secretary treasurers in comparable sized districts.

The district spends $27,440 annually on executive vehicle leases and in 1997 they paid $26,921 in cellular phone bills.

SD 63 still complies with provincial government guidelines, but Fea said some of that is achieved by asking principals to teach a course. Their salaries can then be shifted over to the instructional portion of the budget and away from administration said Fea.

Woolford would also like to see the district freeze new initiatives that include appointing and paying for new specialized project teams and consultants.

Start investing in training

The much-touted fast ferries are now being maligned by the daily and broadcast media as far over-priced white elephants. There is great glee in the voices of the Liberal Party opposition, once again blaming the provincial government for one more major Clark-induced screw up. But is it? Are the ferries floating fiascos of fiscal mismanagement?

If Greg Ramsay is to be believed the ferries themselves are viable. No question, he stands to benefit from these contracts — but he's also a successful businessman. Would he continue, and want to privatize the industry, if there was nothing to base that on? His company would be taking all the risks.

Fast ferries aren't new. More than 200 of these medium and fast-speed catamarans are in use around the world. Australia manufactures them and uses them daily, as does Finland, the United Kingdom, Japan, and Malaysia, to name a few. The ferries being built in B.C. use the same technology as those made in Australia, which are considered at the forefront of the industry. B.C. even made some of its own technological improvements.

Whether the government knew about the changes in cost or not will come out in the review process. They should have known what was going on in a project this size.

Who knew what, and who should have been reporting to whom must be worked out. That's only good business. After all, this is the project that is supposed to revitalize our ship-building industry.

But just because the government didn't watch the numbers doesn't mean the whole industry is a bust. It simply means this government has done what it always does — spend, with little accountability.

If these ships are viable, as the industry insists they are, then perhaps the initial costs are worth it. Some of that money went into training 600 ship-builders, an art that had been left to die in B.C. More money went into design and technology changes — which are industry investments, and part of any good business.

It's time British Columbia stopped saying No to sustainable industry. This province has not stood behind its people in providing good opportunity for technical or trades training, and we are all the big losers in the deal. B.C. is at least two viable industries short these days. Let's not throw the boat out with the bucket until the verdict is in.

- J.R.

MASSIVE COST OVERRUNS ON FAST FERRIES PROJECT COME AS COMPLETE SURPRISE, SAYS NDP...

NDP can't dodge blame for ferry fiasco

Flash back to 1995. Glen Clark announces BC Ferries is going to build three new high-tech, high-speed aluminum ferries and then sell the ships around the world. Total cost, $210 million and the first ship will be in the water in less than a year.

Great days ahead for the ship-building industry, and all it takes is a little vision. But the first ship is not in the water in one year, or two years. It's still not in service, almost three years later.

But the government never takes a real look at what's gone wrong, just pushes the deadlines back. Don't worry, it will all work out, Clark says. But if something was supposed to take a year to build and it's taking much longer, it doesn't take an MBA to realize that it's going to cost more. So the first ferry's cost kept climbing over the $70-million budget.

Last month Investment Minister Dan Miller said the price was now $86 million; now he says it's really $113 million. He can't explain why.

The first three ships were supposed to cost $210 million, and now the cost will be more than $300 million. That's a double problem. First, it means BC Ferries is sinking deeper in debt. And second it means the dream of selling these ships around the world is fading.

There may be a market for a $70-million fast ferry; there isn't for a $113-million one. Miller's response is to blame BC Ferries president Tom Ward, who has resigned over the cost overruns.

The minister said he didn't know what was going on. He relied on Ward, who said everything was fine. It's not an acceptable excuse.

Miller and Clark have been warned for years by the opposition

"The issue isn't just 'did the government know'. It is also whether they should have known ..."

and less partisan critics that there were problems. They have had concrete evidence, as the project fell behind schedule, costs climbed, performance questions rose. Call an inquiry, they were urged. Find out what's gone wrong.

But they wouldn't. So for Miller to act now as if this was some nasty surprise out of the blue, isn't good enough. The issue isn't just 'did the government know'. It is also whether the government should have known if it was acting responsibly.

Everyone else knew the problems were there. Why didn't Clark and Miller? Why did they appoint Jack Munro, a former union head and NDP loyalist, to the key position of chair of the board of CFI, the company building the fast ferries? Why not an independent chair, with appropriate experience, for such a critical position?

The CFI board was told in November that the cost of the first ship had risen again, from $86 million to $94 million. They didn't tell the politicians, or the BC Ferries board, instead ordering an internal investigation. And quite incredibly, no one on the BC Ferries board asked at its December meeting how costs on the fast ferry project were going, says Evelyn Gillespie, the NDP MLA on the board.

Now Ward is gone and Philip Halkett, a long-time bureaucrat, is in place, and more internal investigations are under way. What went wrong? Ferries board chair Curtis Eaton said the pressure to catch up once the ship fell behind schedule added to costs. The reporting systems at CFI were inadequate. And most of all, the whole project plans were wrong.

"My own view is that we had a budget that was optimistic and we had a schedule that was completely unrealistic."

How about an additional cause? The fast ferries were another Glen Clark "big project." The people picked to be involved were advocates, not managers. Like other Clark "big projects" it was to be fast-tracked. And the government ignored all the obvious evidence that this was falling apart, willfully blind to reality, worried more about the politics of the project than its real progress.

No one accepts responsibility. We all pay the price. Nothing learned. More trouble ahead.

Eh ... What's up, doc?

Been down so long it looks like up to me.

- Old blues lyric

I've got a question for you: which way is 'up'? The question is not nearly as frivolous as it sounds. Why is it we refer to Tuktoyaktuk as being 'up north' but when we talk about Windsor, Ontario we say it's 'down south'?

For that matter, where do Calgarians get off referring to Torontonians as 'East-erners'?

Not to a Haligonian they're not.

I remember the first time I became aware of the relativity of 'up north'. I was living in Toronto at the time and I mentioned to an acquaintance that I was going 'up north' for the weekend.

"Oh?" he said. "Whereabouts?"

"Barrie," I answered. He laughed 'til he cried. He was from Sudbury.

Later I moved to Thunder Bay, Ontario and discovered that people from British Columbia still considered me an Easterner.

Easterner? In Thunder Bay I was living in practically the dead centre of the whole danged country! If a Thunder Bay resident was an Easterner, what the hell was Joey Smallwood?

'Up' and 'down'; 'east' and 'west'; 'left' and 'right' — they all mean different things to different people. I remember as a little kid squatting in my backyard and digging like a maniac with my tiny sand shovel. My dad came along when I was down about a foot and a half, smiled and asked: "What do you think you're trying to do — dig a hole to China?"

I didn't know what he meant. So he explained to me that we all lived on this big ball called Earth, and if I dug deep and long enough I would eventually tunnel right through to the other side of the ball — possibly in the middle of a street in downtown Beijing.

Cosmic stuff for a little kid to digest. What I couldn't get my mind around was the image of all these Chinese people walking around upside down on this giant ball we all shared.

Now, I live on Canada's West Coast. That means that just about every day I wake up to radio newscasts and read newspaper stories about various happenings in 'The Far East'.

Which is to the ... left, or west ... of where I live ... if I think about it while I'm facing ... up, or north.

My Far East is St. John's, Newfoundland. Hong Kong is more like the Near West to me.

My grasp on reality is shaky enough with out this complication. I find it all very confusing, and I personally hold Ptolemy responsible.

Ptolemy was an astronomer in Ancient Egypt, living about a century after the birth of Christ. It was Ptolemy who started the whole tradition of putting the north pole at the top of maps and globes — probably because the northern hemisphere was explored earlier than the rest of the globe and those early cartographers just filled in the rest by adding it to the bottom of their charts. Besides, it greatly simplified things when our notions of terrestrial geography were pictured on flat pieces of paper.

As the centuries passed, it became an unquestioned convention to place the North Pole at the top of the chart.

It became our geographical 'up'.

And that's just looking at it from the 'earthly' point of view. Now that we're sending rockets to Mars, the moon and Venus; now that we fully acknowledge that planet Earth is but one whirling ball of dirt in a near-endless galaxy of whirling balls of dirt, the idea of 'up' and 'down' or even 'left' and 'right' becomes well-nigh ludicrous.

Everybody's 'down' is somebody else's 'up'. Take the residents of Canada's southernmost city — Windsor, Ontario. You know what's immediately north of them?

The U.S. city of Detroit.

You could look it up.

I met Dr. Porzecanski when I decided to obtain corrective eye surgery. From the first day that I met Dr. Porzecanski, he was courteous, friendly and very professional. After my surgery – which turned out perfect the first time – Dr. Porzecanski and all of his staff treated me extremely well. He was very thorough in all the follow up appointments and addressed all my concerns, answered all my questions and filled out forms that I needed done. It has been 15 months since my surgery and I have 20/20 vision in both eyes.

I highly recommend Dr. Porzecanski for corrective eye surgery and hope him well in all his endeavors.

CALL FOR YOUR FREE PERSONAL ASSESSMENT TODAY

In support of MPS trustees

Until recently I knew very little about the Memorial Park Society. Like so many others, I assumed that Sanscha Hall was owned by the Town of Sidney and the North Saanich municipality.

I assumed that the green belt between Sanscha Hall and the Skateboard Park was owned by the Town of Sidney, and assumed that the green belt on the other side of the Skateboard Park was airport land, and assumed that the Peninsula Youth Centre paid market rent for that property.

And I assumed that blue Heron Park was owned by the North Saanich municipality.

Only after getting involved with the Peninsula Youth centre did I find out how much the Memorial Park Society has done for our community, and how much the trustees have done. Did you know that the MPS only charge the Peninsula Youth Centre $1 a year for rent?

Come on and show your community spirit. Call your elected representatives today and ask them to support the Memorial Park Society, and ask your friends to call as well.

Sanscha issue must go be put to referendum

Further to Brenda Harfield's letter in last week's Peninsula Review, she isn't the only one to lament on the dilemma of the future of our "heritage building," Sanscha Hall, and what is left of the surrounding property, dedicated in Trust to the citizens of North Saanich and Sidney.

Through expropriation, first by the provincial government for the building of the Pat Bay Highway in the 1950s and early 1960s, and second by the Town of Sidney for the bypass from Beacon to Bevan Avenue in 1983, the Memorial Park Society received $900,000 in Trust funds which, according to the Trust, could be spent only on Trust lands, and in the event of expropriation, alternative lands as part of the Trust.

And now that they are broke and have lost the support of the Regional Board because it is no longer willing to rent Sanscha Hall through its Recreation Commission, they are virtually bankrupt.

They have no power to do anything but to conduct a referendum to ask the combined residents of both municipalities if they are in favor of the MPS turning over the Trust to the municipalities and then to resign.

The municipalities of both Sidney and North Saanich's hands are tied, as they cannot hold a referendum, since they do not own the property. They were able to send out a questionnaire, but it wasn't worth a hoot as it did not include all the pertinent information regarding estimated costs and reliable figures of maintaining the present Sanscha or of building a new structure to replace it.

So far as I am concerned, by comparison, they might just as well have asked the question: "Are you in favor of a new car, or keeping the old one?"

In a letter of Sept. 16, 1998 received from the Town, Terry Kral, municipal clerk, it was stated that the Town of Sidney, at its regular meeting of Sept. 14, passed a resolution that "The Memorial Park Society be requested to hold a public forum of the residents of both communities, the owners of the lands, to determine if they support the Town of Sidney becoming the sole Trustee of the Trust and all the lands."

In view of that resolution, the MPS is now responsible for conducting a referendum to determine the wishes of the Sanscha land owners regarding this important issue. The Town has been given the impetus for the MPS to carry this out — the ball is now in their court.

Joan Dear

Municipalities should take over

Re: the changeover of the Trust from the MPS to the municipalities.

With all due respect to the MPS, it is not the best vehicle for the Trust in view of the substantial additions proposed to the Trust. As the Supreme Court Justice said, a trust in the hands of a private organization is in danger of falling into the hands of a self-interest group.

The present MPS executive will not always be there; they will surely be replaced by others who may not be as sympathetic to the Trust.

Do the municipalities realize this fact?

Are they willing to pour millions into Sanscha to have it owned by the MPS?

I doubt it; nor would the senior governments likewise look favorably on the substantial grants with the Trust in the hands of the MPS.

The proposed centre likely will never get off the ground unless the Trust is turned over to the municipalities. It is not unusual for a municipality to hold land in trust. A case in point is Beacon Hill Park in Victoria.

Compare this with the Senior Citizens Centre in Sidney: This centre was built on land owned by Sidney following a referendum authorizing the money. Once built, the Town undertook the maintenance of building and grounds and turned the operation of programs over to the Silver Threads. It has been operating very successfully for several years, with its services available to both Sidney and North Saanich (some also from Central Saanich and Victoria).

NAMES IN THE NEWS

New partnership, new name for Peninsula arts council

Laurel Baker & Judy Reimche
Peninsula News Review

Carol Wallace, a Central Saanich resident, will be one of the film makers highlighted at the 5th annual Victoria Independent Film and Video Festival to be held January 29 to February 4.

Wallace teamed up with noted sculptor and director Todd Tyarm to create Voices From the Talking Stick, a film that documents the artistic and cultural traditions of the Haida from the inside out.

Screening of Voices From the Talking Stick is January 31, 8:15 p.m. at the Recital Hall, 907 Pandora Avenue.

For more information on the Festival itself, check out their website at www.coast-net.com/~cinevic

For passes and forum tickets see Chapters Bookstore on Douglas, bolen Books in Hillside mall or call the Infoline: 389-1590.

Central Saanich may soon be sharing an easel with the rest of the Saanich Peninsula — at least as far as the arts are concerned.

Voices From the Talking Stick is a positive and revealing story of the past, present and future told by the Haida people. The Haida, having survived spiritually and psychologically through cataclysmic devastation, offer a vantage of a people literally threatened with extinction as inspiration to the rest of the world. The film was created by Central Saanich resident.

The Sidney and North Saanich Community Arts Council has invited Central Saanich to join the local non-profit organization. Together, the group would become the Peninsula Community Arts Council.

"Our mandate is to stimulate art activities at the local level," said SANSAC director David Caddell.

"This will certainly enhance the arts."

The board of 11 volunteer directors will vote on the proposal and the name change at the March 18 annual general meeting at the Sidney library.

Although Central Saanich is currently considered part of the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria, Caddell says the switch-over makes sense for both groups.

Since a number of SANSAC's 220 members are residents of Central Saanich and already participate in the group's events, Caddell said, "it just seemed logical."

"Artists are free to join any or all of the councils they want to," added Caddell. "The big difference is in the ability to talk about what is happening in the Peninsula."

The board of directors will continue to be elected at the annual general meeting, and the yearly membership fee of $10 will remain the same.

CAC and SANSAC are among five community arts councils in the Capital Region. There are 50 such organizations in the province. SANSAC activities include the annual artists' studio tours, arts and crafts shows, concerts, juried art shows, dance festivals, as well as student readings and art shows.

The organization also grants scholarships and awards, organizes lectures, presentations and workshops, and promotes cultural events.

In addition to fund-raising projects, the eight-year old council also receives funding from local municipalities and the provincial government.

Caddell says that SANSAC is currently looking for gallery space, permanent office areas, and teaching rooms.

Here's one that works anywhere, anytime:

February 8 to 14 is Random Acts of Kindness Week. Smile, open a door for someone, pick up litter, hug your kids, tell people you appreciate them, pray for others, bring treats to work, leave a big tip, offer to babysit, bake cookies for a neighbor, return shopping carts, feed the birds — don't just think up ideas, really do it.

You'll feel better about life.

Valentine's Day is just around the corner.

Are you looking for a special way to let that special someone know how you feel?

Have a Barbershop Quartet serenade your sweetheart with some good, old-fashioned love songs — those songs that come right from your heart and make you smile.

For $40, a quartet from the Victoria Village Squires will visit the object of your affection, deliver a flower, along with your message in a card and a Valentine balloon. And for the highlight of his or her life, will sing two love songs.

Funds raised go to the parent society, the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of BarberShop Quartet Singing in America, of which the Victoria groups are members. The society in turn contributes to charities supporting disadvantaged children, especially those dealing with children with speech problems.

The offer is open from Friday, Feb. 12 through Monday, Feb. 15 — but reserve early.

Call Ray's BarberShop in Sidney at 655-0812 to book your serenade.

Use the greenhouse to hurry spring

That wretch, Carolyn K. has gone and disturbed my long winter's nap. With all this rain the prospect of gardening hasn't been high on my list ... I've been thinking more of buying a row-boat rather than seeds.

But, when we talked today she tells me that she is ready to put in garden peas, and lettuce. I groaned and said, "Where could you put them that the seed wouldn't rot in this cold, wet ground?"

Cheerfully she said, "I start them in pots in the greenhouse, and set them outside in a cloche when they are tiny. That way I have fresh peas long before anyone else."

And, of course, she will. She is putting in "Green Arrow" which produces large quantities of truly delicious peas on tall, strong vines that require at least six-foot stakes. This variety has to be planted early though, since it isn't resistant to the "pea enation mosaic virus" which attacks some peas when weather warms up.

HELEN LANG

Over the Garden Fence

Now, I'm going to have to buy seeds and activate myself, not wanting to be the last person on the Peninsula to serve fresh peas for dinner!

The greenhouse, though, is a real mess. I told you about the rats eating the bulbs. Well, not only that, but they have dug tunnels through the central bed and thrown the soil out in large heaps on the floor. That bed really needs to be torn out and re-built. It has been there for 20 years, and produced handsomely all that time, but now it is pretty rickety, and needs professional help.

The greatest deterrent is that the soil (there must be a ton of it!) will have to be removed, and piled outside to make room for someone to work inside. I suppose it could be piled on a tarp, and another plastic cover laid on top to try to keep it dry ... the mere thought exhausts me!

However, that really doesn't stop me from planting peas in small pots, does it? and I do have a lot of Reemay cloth, and plastic suitable for covering early crops outside. Oh dear! I guess I'm in for it now. Please, though, unless you have some means of covering peas, lettuces, radishes, and Broad beans don't rush it. We are almost certainly going to have hard frosts before this winter is over, and killed crops are enough to make anyone weep.

I have some interesting news about amaryllis bulbs, if you have one in bloom. The secret of huge multiple flowering plants is to fertilize them regularly every two weeks from now until the end of August. They should go outside for the summer, then be allowed to rest by withdrawing water, keeping the bulb in a cool dry place, from the end of August until the first week in November.

At that time, remove the bulb from its pot and gently wash off all the old soil, cut off any dead or damaged roots, and re-pot in fresh soil, in either the same pot, or one just slightly larger, leaving the top one-third to one-half of the bulb above the soil.

Water well once, and when new growth starts, commence your regular watering and feeding program. Small bulbs which may grow alongside the parent may be gently pulled away, and potted separately.

Fertilize and water as above, and in a couple of years you'll have a second flowering amaryllis as big and beautiful as it's Mum.

Thanks to Cher, yesterday I visited a greenhouse grower of roses, alstroemeria and snapdragons. The flowers there were so beautiful it would make a statue weep, and I came away more in love with alstroemeria than ever.

You can now purchase roots of this perennial in garden centres ... not right now, but in the spring. They seem to be hardy in this climate, but tend to spread rather vigorously. As far as I'm concerned this wouldn't be a problem ... the more the merrier!

From 10 a.m. until 12 noon, Saturday Jan. 30 the Horticultural Centre of the Pacific is holding a workshop called Fragrance in Your Winter Garden, with Valerie Murray.

This includes a guided walk through the Hort's renowned Doris Page winter garden.

Helen Lang will take your questions. Call her at 656-5918.

A vas deferens between procedures

The military has an odd knack of referring to any nerve racking medical procedure as a "parade," as though the thought of a marching band, twirling batons and juggling NDPoliticians in clownsuits, lessens the inevitable discomfort.

"NEEDLE PARADE" for example is the lining up of the troops for inoculations.

My personal favorite was "VAS PARADE" when, every Friday morning, all those "wishing" vasectomies would present to the clinic.

"The Colonel is here about his Privates," the Medical Assistant would announce gleefully as he marched the shaking officer into the OR. Upon completion of the procedure the Med A would turn to the vulnerable vibrating vasectomized victim and hand him a glass of orange juice. "Welcome to the club, sir."

"What club?"

"The Sunkist orange club, all juice and no seeds."

Predictable debates between husband and wives include: who should change the diapers, who gets up at night with the baby, who goes to Billy's first violin lesson, who meets Billy's angry principal, who tells Billy about the fax of life and finally, when no more Billys are desired, who gets fixed. Vasectomy or tubal ligation. The male or the female. The wimp or the woman.

I hope to solve this debate in this column and my final recommendations will be based purely on the medical facts with a slight bias towards those from whom I get tickets to the NHL All-star game.

Reflex Hammer

The vas deferens are the tubes that men possess that transport Billy's future sibs. They must be cut and tied off if this is to no longer occur. (The old medical skool joke was that there is a vas deferens between a man and a woman).

More than 600,000 vasectomies are performed annually in North America with the newest improvement on the procedure being the No Scalpel Vasectomy (NSV). While this may conjure up images of a surgeon using assorted dental instruments or really sharp fingernails, in fact, it is through a very small puncture in the scrotum that the procedure is done. NSV is done under local anaesthetic with what the surgeon will describe as just a "small mosquito bite."

Small or not, to most men, a needle in that part of the anatomy may as well be the jaws of life. Routine mosquito bites become vicious sabre tooth attacks.

No scalpel vasectomy involves no stitches, no shaving, no scalpel and no sniveling. Advantages of this procedure is less bleeding, less infection and less time in which someone is fiddling with the nether regions. The vas is severed and the tubes are tied off.

There is no decrease in libido and the failure rate (failure meaning Billy gets a sister) is less than one per cent. Sometimes a little lump can develop at the site but besides some occasional post-op swelling there are few complications.

It must be considered a permanent sterilization. Reversal is not terribly successful, is expensive and is like trying to take two strands of thread and aligning the ends precisely head to head, then sew them together.

Tubal ligations on the other hand require penetration into the abdominal cavity. The fallopian tubes leading from the ovaries to the uterus are either clipped, cauterized or cut. Again it is a relatively simple procedure with few complications. Done right after childbirth this is easy and effective (and the patient is usually highly motivated).

Though this too must be considered permanent, reversal is somewhat more successful than with vasectomies.

The advantages of the vasectomy therefore are that it is safer, easier and quicker. The disadvantages are that it is not as easily reversible and it has to be performed on men.

Speaking of the disadvantaged reminds me, it's "SPINE INSERTION PARADE" today and the clinic is full of jugglers in clown-suits.

A Sea Dog turns businessman

Brad Morrison

Captain James Murray Reid, was born on Oct. 15, 1802, in the Orkney Islands. Entering the marine division of Hudson's Bay Company about 1822, he served on several ships which made their way from London to York Factory, delivering and dropping off cargo and personnel.

He served as the first officer of the Prince Albert, and later the Prince Rupert VI on which he gained the reputation of an able officer.

In 1852, Reid received the command of the new HBC Brigantine Vancouver, [192 tons, with a small auxiliary engine] the third vessel of that name in the Company's service. As her Captain, he made his first voyage to the Pacific, a trip that changed his fortunes in the matter of months.

Archibald Barclay, secretary of the HBC, wrote James Douglas on June 29, 1852: "Captain Reid who has been many years in the Company's service, in which he has conducted himself with uniform propriety, takes out his wife and three daughters with the view of ultimately settling on Vancouver's Island [sic]..."

The Vancouver left London on June 30 and arrived at Fort Victoria on Dec. 13, 1852, with Captain Reid at her helm, accompanied by his wife Mary [nee Petrie] and their three daughters, Catherine, Mary Ann, and Elizabeth.

After making small a number of trips delivering and picking up goods, Captain Reid received orders from Douglas on August 1, 1853 to proceed to Fort Simpson, and begin to deliver the yearly 'Outfits' to the Company's Posts. Unaccustomed to those northern waters and their hazards, the Captain placed Mr. Swanson, an able pilot, as first officer. Even with that precaution, the vessel went aground.

Lewis and Dryden, in their monumental volume Marine History of the Pacific Northwest, relate: "In August she left for Fort Simpson in command of Captain Reid. [sic] Captain Swanson went up with her as pilot, as he was familiar with the waters of the North, while Reid [sic] was a new man. The night of the wreck there was a good stretch of water ahead, and, after giving the course to the quartermaster and to Reid [sic], Swanson went to his berth for a nap. No sooner had he retired than Reid [sic] changed the course and in short order had the brig aground. The wind was blowing a gale, and it set her on the spit with such force that it was impossible to float her. A boat was sent to Fort Simpson, and the Beaver was dispatched to the scene. The Indians claimed the wreck, but Captain Dodd, [of the Beaver] with an eye to the business interests of the Hudson's Bay Company, after drenching her with oil set fire to her."

News of the wreck reached Fort Victoria by mid September, and Douglas immediately started to write letters to various HBC Posts, that "we have lost by that misfortune the whole Outfit of Goods and Provisions for the year, which I fear will be a total loss to the Fur Trade as country shipments are not insured." He also requested that if any surplus supplies i.e., woolen goods such as blankets, men's clothing etc., could be spared, to have them sent to Fort Victoria as soon as it was possible.

Upon Captain Reid and his crew's return to Fort Victoria, he was "promptly dismissed from the service of the company, and Swanson was exonerated." Without a ship to command, no income, and a "wife and family to support and a home to build for them," his son-in-law recounts, "he did not lose heart, and went into the mercantile business on his own account."

Dr. John S. Helmecken, who served with him for a season on the Prince Rupert as ship's surgeon, wrote that Reid purchased some waterfront property and wharf facilities and land "adjoining Yates and his wife and daughters carried on a small haberdashery business — and by degrees others took to living outside [the fort] also."

On Nov. 26, 1853, Captain Reid made his first land purchase, [Town Lot #202,] for £10. By July 1854, he had applied and received a Spirits retail license, and was "establishing connection with London wholesale houses."

Over the next few years with the prospective growth of the Colony, he became a wealthy man. Douglas commented: "The Colony is growing apace, slowly but surely, and we have already that indisputable mark of civilization, a tavern."

With the arrival of the HBC clipper Princess Royal, on Jan. 18, 1857, Mary Marcus, the daughter of Captain Reid's sister Elizabeth came to live with her uncle. Later, the Captain adopted her as part of his own family. She arrived shortly before Catherine, his eldest daughter was to be married to William John Macdonald, on March 17.

Shortly before the Princess Royal's arrival, gold was found in small quantities on the mainland. The ore was forwarded to Fort Victoria, and notice of its discovery was sent to London to the HBC Governor and Committee. The information was kept quiet for about a year and a half before the masses in California found out, and the Fraser River gold rush began. Captain Reid might have had prior knowledge of the news, from his son-in-law, and made preparations before hand, although there is no firm evidence of it. One way or the other, Captain Reid, made a great deal of money during the gold excitement.

Late in 1858, Macdonald retired from the HBC service and joined his father-in-law in the mercantile business.

In 1859, after the official survey of the Saanich Districts by John Trutch, both Reid and Macdonald purchased land in the districts. The Land records are not clear as to exactly where Reid's land was located, but he is recorded as having at least 50 acres freehold in early 1860.

On Oct. 9, 1860, a happy event occurred — a double ringed marriage. Captain Reid's daughter Mary Ann married Captain William Moriarty, and Reid's niece and adopted daughter Mary Marcus married John Coles, whom we have examined in previous weeks.

Near the end of 1860, Reid was persuaded to stand for the Esquimalt Town District seat in the Legislature. At the elections, in an open show of hands, [there were no secret ballots 'generally used' in public elections.] Reid received the majority of the votes.

This was contested by his opponent, G. T. Gordon, who demanded that the voting be repolled. This was conducted the next day, with the result of Gordon winning. Amor De Cosmos, the owner and editor of the British Colonist, had a fit. Taking his 'pen in hand and fumed' he wrote a lengthy

Parkland celebrates its 25th birthday

Parkland secondary school is 25 years old this year. To celebrate, they have a whole weekend of festivities planned, and everyone is invited. All former students, staff and anyone who has worked at the school in any capacity is asked to register their intent to be part of the fun on May 28, 29 and 30.

"We hope everyone — whether they graduated or not — will come in to see how the school has changed and grown. And to renew old friendships," said current principal Greg Bunyan.

Each graduating class has been assigned a classroom where they can sign in and renew acquaintances with fellow students.

Saturday will be a festival for the whole community to attend. There are already several events to highlight sports, fine arts, music, dance and many other activities. Plus, there will be activities for children.

One of the on-going projects that will kick off this year is a legacy fund being set up. Donations will receive tax credit and will be used at the discretion of the school for educational projects.

To get involved, fax the school at 655-2701, or email

Tom Browne (tombrowne@home.com) or Shelley Nielsen (westwind@islandnet.com)

Change is constant

There is an old saying that change is the only constant thing, and the financial services industry is certainly no exception.

At one time there were what was known as the "four pillars." The industry was dominated by the banks, the insurance companies, the investment dealers and the trust companies.

Each had their own area of expertise and each operated relatively independently of the others. That is certainly no longer the case.

In some ways the industry has become much more fragmented but in some ways it is simultaneously more concentrated.

Over the years there has been a blurring of the distinction between the various "pillars." While many of the traditional providers of financial services are still operating, a number of entirely new entities have also evolved.

We now have discount brokerage firms, boutique investment firms, virtual banks, on-line insurance companies; the list goes on.

On the surface this would appear to represent fragmentation in the industry, and to some extent, it is. On the other hand, it is not uncommon for one institution to own all or many of the apparently diverse companies.

For example, most of the chartered banks own a full service investment firm, a discount investment firm, their own house in financial services staff, their own trust company and may even offer certain types of insurance through a subsidiary. Of course they also do the banking. This represents concentration.

Wealthy Ways

This level of concentration raised concerns, and ultimately lead to the government's decision to not allow the recently proposed bank mergers.

One of the recommendations which was made by the committee studying financial services in this country concluded that foreign banks should be allowed greater access to Canada. This in itself signals that there are even more changes coming in the industry.

How the large domestic banks will react to the denial of their mergers and increased competition from foreign banks is open to debate. During the year-long debate leading up to Paul Martin's decision to reject the mergers, numerous scenarios were discussed.

Only time will tell what changes will actually be made. But rest assured, changes in the way financial services are provided will continue, probably at an increased pace.

The Grim Examiner pays annual visit

Provincial exams. The mere mention causes Grade 12 students to break into cold sweats, nausea, and night-deadly terror. Like the Grim Reaper, the exams hang over our heads with raised scythes, infiltrating our conversations and even our dreams.

As student Erica Solberg put it, "Nothing can prepare you for the horror of what a provincial exam is."

It's said that only two things in life are certain: death and taxes. Obviously, the person who made that claim did not attend high school in B.C.. Here, anyone who aims to graduate is assured that they will write at least one provincial exam in the course of their school career.

BRIANNA NYBERG

Grade 12s are required to complete one or more of English, Communications or Technical and Professional Communications 12 to graduate. Although this is the only requirement imposed, it has a catch: all three courses end with gruelling provincial exams. And so the Grim Reaper creeps forward hand in hand with the Angel of Graduation. To quote the Unknown Someone once again: "There's no such thing as a free lunch."

The majority of students select English 12 to satisfy their graduation requirements. The course culminates in a three-hour exam made up of five main sections: editing skills, reading comprehension, prose, poetry, and an open-ended essay based on a single prompt word.

The mark the student receives on the exam makes up 40 per cent of the total grade.

The last month has been especially intensive; almost every lesson is focused directly on exam preparation, and often involves actually writing a section of a previous exam.

The January English "provincial" takes place this Friday. So if you see students wandering around with drawn, haggard faces, glazed eyes and rumpled, mismatched clothing, take pity on them. And don't be surprised if you hear screams and roars emanate from your local high school at around noon on the 29th. It's only those exam-ravaged students, emerging from the black hole of the English 12 provincial.

Provincial politics weren't in Reid's future

editorial beginning: "Yesterday was played [a] highly successful farce of 'the Esquimalt Town election.'"

"Moreover, it would be historically unjust to Mr. Gordon to say he was elected. We will do for him what his friends will not — we say he was appointed to a seat in the Assembly. Esquimalt may ... therefore ... be set down as a rotten borough, and the knowledge of that fact should incite the residents of the district to break through their shackles as speedily as possible. So far they have done nobly; but it remains with them to eradicate their rivals at the next election, for 'who would be free themselves must strike the blow.'"

As the result of this disappointment, Captain Reid, did not put forward his name in future elections to the Legislature. Instead, he directed his attention to his business concerns and the local city council, where he served as a councillor for several years.

On April 24, 1869, Captain James Murray Reid, aged 65, died after a lengthy and painful illness. His funeral was held four days later, and the service was performed by Rev. Edward Cridge, assisted by Rev. James Raynard (who was later the Vicar of St. Stephen's Church in South Saanich). The British Colonist stated: "The chief mourners were Capt. Moriarty, R. N., and Hon. W. J. Macdonald. Among the followers we noticed Rear-Admiral Hastings, Flag-Lieutenant Brookes and Captain Dawkins, R. N., Sir James Douglas, and most of our prominent citizens and pioneers."

Vision Matters

Eyesight and safe driving

When we drive, we make most of our decisions on the basis of visual cues: the position of other vehicles and pedestrians, traffic lights, signs, hazard warnings etc. Good vision is crucial to safe driving. Vision for driving involves more than the ability to read the letters on the eye chart (central vision): Peripheral vision, depth perception and colour vision are all important factors which influence our judgment while driving. The Motor Vehicle Branch tests these visual skills when we first apply for a driver's license. This screening is not a substitute for a full eye examination by a Doctor of Optometry who can prescribe corrective lenses or other treatment, if necessary, and evaluate the health of the eyes.

Our eyes change in subtle and gradual ways as we age. We may not realize our vision has gradually deteriorated to a level that does not meet the legal and safe requirements for operating a motor vehicle. In many cases, the solution may be as simple as, new prescription lenses.

Glare is a common problem to most drivers when the sun is low in the sky ahead and when the road surface is wet and shiny. Sunglasses may help, along with cleaning your windshield. Another cause of glare may be cataracts, which can develop as we age. This cloudiness in the lenses of the eyes can cause an increase in sensitivity to light in the early stages. Your optometrist can advise you about tinted lenses to reduce glare and continue to counsel you as the cataracts develop.

Regular eye examinations determine if your vision is good enough for safe driving. You owe it to yourself and everyone else on the road to make sure that you are seeing well and reacting to situations as quickly as possible.

An oasis for coffee and bagel lovers

Whether you're on the run or have a leisurely lunch, plan to visit Bagel Oasis Café.

Created in March of 1998, the first Bagel Oasis Café was opened in the new shopping centre in Saanichton, Heritage Centre, the No.1 store in a new franchise. With the opening of their No.2 location at Royal Oak Shopping Centre recently, a new success story is being written — with bagel and coffee in hand!

The locally-developed concept takes that niche between the standard style coffee house and the typical bagel sandwich shop and marries the two into the best of both worlds. Thus Bagel Oasis Café was born.

With that in mind, Bagel Oasis Café searched for the best products they could get — Seattle's Best Coffee and the premier fresh-baked bagel.

Bagel Oasis Café offers fresh roasted gourmet coffee in all forms — from beans to fresh brewed. Plus, bagels are offered up in a variety of flavours — from bulk take-home to individual bagels and prepared bagel sandwiches.

To round out the menu, choose from juices, cold drinks, pastries, cakes and cookies, along with piping hot soups of the day. All your favourites in one place!

Bagel Oasis Café — a place to relax, enjoy the many menu choices and indulge yourself.

Come for a coffee, have a chat with friends, stop in after a busy time shopping, and enjoy what Bagel Oasis Café has to offer. Make it your place — close to home.

Bon appetit!

A celebration of high school hoops

Parkland secondary school pulled out all the stops for their big game against long-time district rival Stelly's last Thursday night.

The festivities included a live band, a half-time show featuring the school's dance squad and a shooting contest between fans and local police officers (lower left). The gym was filled to capacity with more than a few high energy fans who were led by the Panther's mascot (lower right) and one caped-crazy named Judo (upper left). Breaks in the hardcourt action meant upbeat music pumped through the speakers and high-energy cheers from several of the sideline cheerleaders (upper right).

When the final buzzer sounded, Parkland fans had plenty of reason to make noise as their Parkland Panthers came out on top with a 71-57 win over the Stelly's Stingers.

It was a tough week for the Stinger's, who also lost 91-50 to Belmont. Stelly's then took on three Vancouver schools in exhibition, but lost 70-62 to King George, 74-66 to University Hill and 71-66 to Magee. In senior women's action, Stelly's lost 65-45 to Oak Bay, but split a pair of exhibition games, losing 74-45 to King George before blowing out Magee 70-25.

Bantam B in third

With three games still in hand over the competition, the Peninsula Bantam B Eagles have moved into third place.

The Eagles moved up in league standings after posting a 6-4 win and a 2-2 draw against Juan de Fuca.

The team followed up with a trip over to Burnaby where they played a pair of exhibition games.

First up was Surrey and a tough 7-1 loss. Julian Dunford scored the lone Peninsula goal.

The team woke up in time for their next game against Coquitlam and came away with a 4-2 win.

Dunford counted twice for the Eagles in the first period. Chris Paulson added the winner in the second and Matt Broad hit the empty net for the insurance goal.

Atom B Eagles sweep

The Peninsula Atom B Eagles are on a roll after sweeping a two-game weekend series against Victoria competition.

The Eagles opened the weekend with a 4-2 Saturday win over the Victoria Cougars. Jeff Spoor's breakaway goal late in the third period sealed the win for Peninsula.

Other Eagles' scorers included Matthew Findell, Josh Ceasor and Stewart Hepburn.

Ceasor and Findell counted helpers as well. Recording assists were Michael Pires, Eric Johnson and Steve Kot.

The Eagles came out ready to play against Racquet club the next day and beat the Kings 6-4.

Alistar Cochrane scored his first goal of the season to help secure the Peninsula victory.

Jeff Sopnick had 2 for the winners while Kot, Ceasor and Pires each counted once among the goal scorers.

Assists went to Ceasor, Pires, Spoor, Russell Tenning and Chris Gower.

Goalie's Ted Stelk, Brendan McTeer and Jeremy Warren all played well after being called up for the weekend.

Eagles pound Parksville

The Peninsula Eagles Pee Wee C hockey team came home from Parksville last Sunday with a 7-2 victory.

The scoring started early for Peninsula when Jason Weare found the back of the Parksville net 40 seconds into the first period. Dillon Coghill and Lucas Brown assisted on the quick goal.

Korey Sandsmark doubled the visitor's lead less than two minutes later.

Weare, who normally splits goaltending duties with Aaron Haazen, finished the first period with a hat trick and the Peninsula route was on.

In the second, Parksville finally put one past Haazen, but Phil Turcotte scored for the Eagles by popping in Ian Mutsaers rebound to put Peninsula back up by 4. Pete Carson then blasted one in from the point to make the score 6-1.

Parksville closed the gap in the third period with a quick goal, but Brown, who finished with four points, fired in a nice pass from Brandon and Dillon Coghill to put the game out of reach.

Garry Oak Preserve Open House

Saturday, January 30th, 10:00 am - 3:00 pm

Central Saanich Cultural Centre

1209 Clarke Road, Room A (adjacent to the Library)

In late 1997, the District of Central Saanich acquired a 25 acre hilltop site featuring a rare Garry Oak forest ecosystem. This land, located south of Benvenuto Avenue between Wallace Dr. and West Saanich Rd., is now preserved as a nature park. A Management Plan is presently being prepared for this site.

As part of this planning process, an Open House will be held this Saturday. The District, along with other local agencies interested in the preservation of Garry Oak ecosystems, will have informational materials and displays for viewing.

District Council and Staff welcome the opportunity to answer your questions and receive and comments/suggestions you may have on the future use and development of this Park.

Some employment PERCs

Saanich Peninsula Chamber of Commerce board of directors met to plan a course of action for 1999, in keeping with our intent to remain the "voice of business on the Peninsula." Directors infused the meeting with fresh ideas and enthusiasm.

To strengthen our ties with the Peninsula's youth and to promote a partnership between business and education, we will focus on the PERC program.

Initiated in 1992 by Keith MacCallian, then principal of Victoria High School, and teacher Brian Twahig, the PERC program was designed to keep students in school and to reward those who displayed good to outstanding work habits, regardless of marks achieved.

To qualify for the PERC card students must demonstrate to the selection committee that they possess the four qualities from which the program takes its name: Punctuality, Enthusiasm, Responsibility, Cooperation.

EILEEN LEDDY
Chamber Matters

Bonnie McCulloch of the Youth Employment Services, an affiliate of Peninsula Community Services, is coordinating the PERC program for the second year. Eligibility criteria: arrive for class on time, display energy and motivation, display care in completion of assignments, accept direction well and submit assignments on time. A selection committee consisting of three education facilitators, three business representatives and three student peers, evaluate the applications and determine card recipients.

The intent of the card is to help students find summer employment and full-time employment after graduation. For prospective employers, a PERC card referral on a resume means the student has demonstrated a positive attitude and well-developed work habits. That student is a likely candidate for employment.

The Saanich Peninsula Chamber is pleased to be a part of this program, along with the Greater Victoria and West shore Chambers. On the Peninsula, PERC is available to students from Parkland, Stelly's and Claremont secondary schools. Our chamber encourages students to apply for the PERC card. And we encourage employers to become aware of these hardworking, conscientious young people.

Eileen Leddy is a local business writer, editor and member of the Saanich Peninsula Chamber.

Ardmore 1.13 Acre Lot Falkirk Drive

One of the peninsula's most pleasing residential locations and certainly one of the region's best kept secrets! Ardmore is characterized by large lots, ocean access, beaches, trails, golf courses, quiet roads, a natural environment and all within easy reach of Victoria, the airport and Sidney. A lightly treed relatively level corner lot 180' wide and 330' deep allowing more design flexibility. In Ardmore there is only one other lot currently on the market. The overall potential vacant lot inventory is small and declining, which will likely further enhance property values. View the opportunity with your building design ideas. MLS new listing $174,900.

TOWN OF SIDNEY WATER MAIN FLUSHING PROGRAM

The Sooke Reservoir is presently full. To take advantage of this situation, flushing of water mains will be carried out in the area north of Beacon Avenue between February 2 and March 5, 1999.

The water pressure may be low in areas where flushing is taking place and discoloration of water may occur.

Residents are advised to run cold water taps to clear their system of any discoloration prior to using washing machines or other water consuming appliances.

The Town of Sidney will not accept any responsibility for damage resulting from use of discolored water.

Who gets our profits? YOU DO!

Over $1.6 million paid back to Co-op members in December.

What would you do with your membership rebate?

- ✓ Make a payment towards my credit card
- ✓ Buy a plane ticket to Hawaii
- ✓ Take out an annual fitness membership
- ✓ Contribute to my RRSP or child's education fund
- ✓ Save it for a rainy day

Rebecca Shaw received a membership rebate of over $700.00 including cash and shares.

Rebecca and her family have been members since we first opened our doors as a warehouse Co-op in 1977.

We asked her about the benefits of being a member/owner of Peninsula Co-op and here is what she said:

"It's excellent that the membership rebate comes in December each year as it sure helps out at Christmas time. The new store renovations are wonderful and the selection now is great! There is a real community spirit at the Co-op and I really like that we support local 4H programs. The staff are wonderful and they really go out of their way to meet my special requests for packing my groceries too!"

Co-op memberships are available to individuals, families and commercial/business organizations.
